LETTER OF THE MONTH:

Dear Eric,

Overall, WEB #114 was a pleasure! I was a bit disappointed by the previous issue, which seemed a little too cluttered. I feel that Spidey and the Black Cat could have handled the Sliencers on their own. I can't help but feel that Gambit's only purpose in the story was to attract X-MEN fans.

I can't believe Lance Bannon is dead. I'd grown fond of him over the years, in spite of his selfish, ultra-competetive personality. In a way, Lance doomed himself. If only he'd stopped for a minute to think of something other than personal glory, he might have realized his life was in danger.

I was troubled by Spidey's reaction to the murder. He felt guilty, but heck, he feels guilty about everything. I would've liked to see a little more shock and sorrow. Sure, he and Lance were professional rivals, but it was a friendly rivalry, tempered with time and mutual respect. On the other hand, perhaps he's so grief-stricken over the situation with his phony parents, he can't handle any more. In any case, I look forward to reading #115!

On another note, remember back in WEB #109, when you said that you'd start featuring a Letter of the Month? What happened to that idea?

Geri Fox
K-7 Shirley Lane
Lawrence, NJ 08648

Fear not, Geri! You youself have achieved the prestigious "Letter of the Month" honor this issue, with your concise, well stated observations about Lance and his relationship with Peter.

You're also correct in your assumptions about Peter's grief over his "parents" affecting his relationships with his friends. "Lifetheft," "Pursuit" and their aftermath have definitely hardened Spidey emotionally, and he's seeming to drift further away from his old self every issue. But it's all part of a series of major turning points in Spidey's life -- and you just aren't gonna believe where it all ends up! And next month, in these very pages, we start the roller coaster ride in earnest!

Dear Web-Zingers,

WEB #114 was one of the best issues of this mag I've seen in a while. I really liked Aunt may's conversation with the mystery man. I have a few ideas as to who this man is...

1) Peter's real father. With what's happened recently, there's no way Peter would trust him.

2) A relation of Harry Osborn; maybe an Uncle or a long-lost brother who would want to carry on the family tradition of villainy.

3) Someone we've never seen or heard of before who wants revenge on Peter or Spider-Man for some unknown reason.

Erik Martin
Box 291
Sutherland, NE 69165

Some interesting guesses there, Erik! You should be pretty thrilled to know that you have only three weeks to see if any of your guesses are correct! That's right, SPECTACULAR SPIDER-MAN #216 finally reveals the identity of the mysterious stranger stalking the Spiderverse... and wait till you see how his appearance shakes things up in this book! (But before that, don't miss the mystery man's appearances in AMAZING #393 and SPIDER-MAN #50 -- as if you'd miss that hologram-cover anniversary issue anyway!

Dear Web-Zingers:

ODE TO A SUPER-HERO

There once was a boy named Peter
A brilliant young scholar was he
He lived with his Aunt and his uncle
His parents having died tragically

One day at a science exhibition
Peter's life took a rather strange twist
As during the safe demonstration
A spider was blown near to bits

The spider then landed on Peter
And bit the young lad out of spite
Which gave Peter great super-powers
And made him a star overnight

Pete's career as a wall-crawling showman
Went on till his Uncle's demise
It taught him a valuable lesson
And made him a hero most wise

Since then he's battled a legion
Of villains of every shape and size
He's been tortured and shamed
Murdered and maimed
And by evil, completely despised

All his friends seem to die sooner or later
Or even become his worst foes
It's almost as though he's silk-screened a target
All over his super hero clothes

Yet, though fate has been cruel
To this web-swinging fool
Don't worry, 'cause this bug-man has guts
And he'll always be my hero
Even if his sales drop to zero
And the Green Goblin blows him to dust.

James Dysart
317 North 8th Street
Brainerd, MN 56401

William Butler Yeats, eat your heart out!

Seriously, James, thanks for sharing your poem with us --even though you did take a little poetic license with the details of Pete's life -- and we hope to have you as a Spidey fan for years to come!

CHANGING OF THE GUARD DEPT.: This issue marks the last by longtime WEB penciler Alex Saviuk, who has plied his considerable talent in these pages for over seven years, as he moves on to both pencil and ink SPIDER-MAN ADVENTURES, the ongoing monthly series adapting episodes of this fall's Spidey animated series! A fine artist, a true professional, and a heckuva nice guy, Alex completes a distinguished stint in style this month, and we're looking forward to even greater things from him ahead!

And what about WEB, you ask? Fear not! Next month, we usher in a new era of spider-excitement with the history-making "Power and Responsibility" crossover, and with it an all-new art team! Steven Butler, who has completed a well-received run on SILVER SABLE, and cut his Spidey-drawing teeth on the Carnage-featuring AMAZING ANNUAL #28 lead feature, will take over penciling chores, while longtime AMAZING inker Randy Emberlin comes aboard as inker! This is a combination that we're confident will blow you away!! And their first story is a doozie; the mystery man finally takes center stage, as he and Spidey meet a major new villain --Traveller -- who is destined to shake up Spider-Man's status quo forever! Think we're kidding? Just wait. In addition, all four Spidey books next month will be available in two editions -- a regular, non-enhanced version, and an enhanced "flip book" with two enhanced foil covers, and a top-secret, extra-special back-up feature echoing events in the main story! Don't miss out on the events that will change the course of Spider-history forever!
